

HYP

He heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart. Shak.
A wife man hateth not the law; but he that is an hypocrite therein, is as a ship in a storm. Ecclef. xxxiii. 3.
Fair hypocrite, you seek to cheat in vain; Dryden.
Your silence argues, you ask time to reign.
The making religion necessary to interest might increase hypocrisy; but if one in twenty should be brought to true piety, and nineteen be only hypocrites, the advantage would still be great. Swift.
Beware, ye honest: the third circling glass
Suffices virtue: but may hypocrites,
Who sily speak one thing, another think,
Hateful as hell, still pleas'd unwarn'd drink on,
And through intemperance grow a while sincere. Phillips.
HYPOCRITICAL. adj. [from hypocrite.] Dissembling; insinuating; appearing differently from the reality.
Now you are confessing your enormities; I know it by that hypocritical, down-cast look. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
Whatever virtues may appear in him, they will be esteemed an hypocritical imposture on the world; and in his retired pleasures, he will be presumed a libertine. Roger's Sermons.
Let others skew their hypocritical face. Swift.
HYPOCRITICALLY. adv. [from hypocritical.] With dissimulation; without sincerity; falsely.
Simeon and Levi spake not only falsely, but insidiously, nay hypocritically, abusing at once their profelytes and their religion. Goverment of the Tongue.
HYPOGASTRICK. adj. [from hypogastrique, French; ὑπογαστρικὸς.] Seated in the lower part of the belly.
The swelling we supposed to rise from an effusion of serum through all the hypogastrick arteries. Wise man's Surgery.
HYPOGEUM. n. s. [from ὑπογῆ and γῆ.] A name which the ancient architects gave to all the parts of a building that were under ground, as cellars and vaults. Harris.
HYPOSTASIS. n. s. [from ὑποστάσις, French; ὑποστάσις.]
1. Distinct substance.
2. Personality. A term used in the doctrine of the Holy Trinity. The oneness of our Lord Jesus Christ, referring to the several hypostases in the one eternal, indivisible, divine nature, and the eternity of the Son's generation, and his co-eternity and consubstantiality with the Father, are assertions equivalent to those before comprised in the ancient simple article. Hammond on Fundamentals.
HYPOSTATICAL. adj. [from ὑποστατικός, French; from hypostasis.]
1. Constitutive; constituent as distinct ingredients.
Let our Cameades warn men not to subscribe to the grand doctrine of the chymists, touching their three hypostatical principles, till they have a little examined it. Boyle.
2. Personal; distinctly personal.
HYPOTEUSE. n. s. [from ὑποτενύσσειν, Fr. ὑποτενύσσειν.] The line that subtends the right angle of a right-angled triangle; the subtense.
The square of the hypotenuse in a right-angled triangle, is equal to the squares of the two other sides. Locke.

HYS

HYPOTHESIS. n. s. [from ὑπόθεσις, Fr. hypothèse.] A supposition; a system formed upon some principle not proved.
The mind casts and turns itself restlessly from one thing to another, till at length it brings all the ends of a long and various hypothesis together; sees how one part coheres with another, and so clears off all the appearing contrarities that seemed to lie cross, and make the whole intelligible. South's Sermon.
With imagin'd sovereignty
Lord of his new hypothesis he reigns:
He reigns: how long? 'till some usurper rise;
And he too, mighty thoughtful, mighty wise,
Studies new lines, and other circles feigns. Prior.
HYPOTHETICAL. adj. [from ὑποθετικός, Fr. from hypothesis.] Including a supposition; conditional.
Conditional or hypothetical propositions are those whose parts are united by the conditional particle if; as, if the sun be fixed, the earth must move. Watts's Logic.
HYPOTHETICALLY. adv. [from hypothetical.] Upon supposition; conditionally.
The only part liable to imputation is calling her a goddess; yet this is proposed with modesty and doubts, and hypothetically. Brown's Notes to Pope's Odyssey.
HYST, } Are all from the Saxon hysse, a wood or grove. Gill.
HURST, }
HERST, }
HYSSOP. n. s. [from ὑσσοπος, Fr. hyssopus, Lat. hysopus.] A verticillate plant, with long narrow leaves: the crest of the flower is roundish, erect, and divided into two parts: the beard is divided into three parts; the middle part is hollowed like a spoon, having a double point, and is somewhat winged: the whorles of the flowers are short, and at the lower part of the stalk are placed at a great distance; but toward the top are closer joined, so as to form a regular spike. It hath been a great dispute, whether the hyssop commonly known is the same which is mentioned in Scripture. Miller.
The hyssop of Solomon cannot be well conceived to be our common hyssop; for that is not the least of vegetables observed to grow upon walls; but rather some kind of capillaries, which only grow upon walls and stony places. Brown.
HYSTERICAL. adj. [from ὑστερικός, French; ὑστερικός.]
HYSTERICK. adj. [from ὑστερικός.]
1. Troubled with fits; disordered in the regions of the womb.
In hysterick women the rarity of symptoms doth oft strike such an astonishment into spectators, that they report them possessed with the devil. Harvey on Conjunction.
Many hysterical women are sensible of wind passing from the womb. Floyer on the Humours.
2. Proceeding from disorders in the womb.
Parent of vapours, and of female wit,
Who gave th' hysterick or poetick fit. Pope's Ra. of the Lark.
This terrible scene made too violent an impression upon a woman in her condition, and threw her into a strong hysterick fit. Arbutnot and Pope's Mord. Scrib.
HYSTERICKS. n. s. [from ὑστερικός.] Fits of women, supposed to proceed from disorders in the womb.

JAC

Is in English considered both as a vowel and consonant; though, since the vowel and consonant differ in their form as well as sound, they may be more properly accounted two letters.
I vowel has a long sound, as fine, thine, which is usually marked by an e final; and a short sound, as fin, thin. Prefixed to e it makes a diphthong of the same sound with the soft i, or double e, ee: thus field, yield, are spoken as feeld, yeeld; except friend, which is spoken freend. Subjoined to a or e it makes them long, as fail, neigh; and to o makes a mingled sound, which approaches more nearly to the true notion of a diphthong, or sound composed of the sounds of two vowels, than any other combination of vowels in the English language, as ais, coin. The sound of i before another i, and at the end of a word, is always expressed by y.
A consonant has invariably the same sound with that of g in giant; as jade, jet, jill, jolt, just.
1. pronoun personal. [from ich, Gothick; ic, Saxon; ich, Dutch.]
I, gen. me; plural we; gen. us. ic, me, pe, ur.
1. The pronoun of the first person, myself.
I do not like these several councils, I. Shaksp. Rich. III.
There is none greater in this house than I. Gen. xxxix. 9.
Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid. Mat. xiv. 27.
What shall I do to be for ever known,
And make the age to come my own?
I shall like beasts or common people dye,
Unless you write my elegy. Cowley.
Hence, and make room for me. Cowley.
When chance of business parts us two,
What do our souls, I wonder, do? Cowley.
Of that book you have given us a large earnest. Cowley.
Thus, having pass'd the night in fruitless pain,
I to my longing friends return again. Dryden's Æn.
2. Me is in the following passage written for I.
There is but one man whom she can have, and that is me. Clarissa.
3. I is more than once in Shakespeare written for ay, or yet.
Hath Romeo slain himself? Say thou but I,
And that bare vowel, I, shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice. Shakespeare.
Did your letters pierce the queen?
—I, sir; she took 'em and read 'em in my presence,
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down. Shakespeare.
To JABBER. v. n. [from jabber, Dutch.] To talk idly; to prate without thinking; to chatter.
We scorn, for want of talk, to jabber Swift.
Of parties.
JABBERER. n. s. [from jabber.] One who talks inarticularly or unintelligibly.
Out cant the Babylonian labourers Hudibras, p. iii.
At all their dialects of jabberers.
JACENT. adj. [from jacens, Latin.] Lying at length.
So laid, they are more apt in swagging down to pierce than in the jacent posture. Watson's Architect.
JACINTH. n. s. [from hyacinth, as Jerusalem for Hierusalem.]
1. The flame with hyacinth.
2. A gem of a deep redish yellow approaching to a flame colour, or the deepest amber. Woodward's Met. Foss.
JACK. n. s. [Probably by mistake from Jaques, which in French is James.]
1. The diminutive of John. Used as a general term of contempt for faucy or paltry fellows.
I am in estimation:
You will perceive that a Jack gardant cannot
Office me from my son Coriolanus. Shakespeare.
I have in my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practise. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.
Every Jack slave hath his belly-full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match. Shaksp.
2. The name of instruments which supply the place of a boy, as an instrument to pull off boots.

I.

JAC

Foot-boys, who had frequently the common name of jack given them, were kept to turn the spit, or to pull off their masters boots; but when instruments were invented for both those services, they were both called jacks. Watts's Logic.
3. An engine which turns the spit.
The excellencies of a good jack are, that the jack frame be forged and filed square; that the wheels be perpendicularly and strongly fixed on the squares of the spindles; that the teeth be evenly cut, and well smoothed; and that the teeth of the worm-wheel fall evenly into the groove of the worm. Maxon.
The ordinary jacks, used for roasting of meat, commonly consist but of three wheels. Wilkins's Math. Magick.
Clocks and jacks, though the screws and teeth be never to smooth, yet, if not oiled, will hardly move. Ray.
A cookmaid, by the fall of a jack weight upon her head, was beaten down. Wise man's Surgery.
Some strain in rhyme; the mufes on their racks
Scream, like the winding of ten thousand jacks. Pope.
4. A young pike.
No fish will thrive in a pond where roach or gudgeons are, except jacks. Mortimer's Husbandry.
5. [from Jaques, French.] A coat of mail.
The residue were on foot, well furnished with jack and skull, pike, dagger, bucklers made of board, and slicing swords, broad, thin, and of an excellent temper. Hayward.
6. A cup of waxed leather.
Dead wine, that stinks of the borrachio, sup
From a foul jack, or grealy mapple cup. Dryden's Pers.
7. A small bowl thrown out for a mark to the bowlers.
'Tis as if one should say, that a bowl equally poised, and thrown upon a plain bowling-green, will run necessarily in a direct motion; but if it be made with a byals, that may decline it a little from a straight line, it may acquire a liberty of will, and so run spontaneously to the jack. Bentley's Sermons.
8. A part of the musical instrument called a virginal.
In a virginal, as soon as ever the jack falleth, and toucheth the string, the sound ceaseth. Bacon's Natural History.
9. The male of animals.
A jack ass, for a stallion, was bought for three thousand two hundred and twenty-nine pounds three shillings and four pence. Arbutnot on Coins.
10. A support to saw wood on.
11. The colours or ensign of a ship. Ainsworth.
12. A cunning fellow who can turn to any thing.
Jack of all trades, shew and found;
An inverse burle, an exchange under ground. Cleveland.
JACK BOOTS. n. s. [from jack, a coat of mail.] Boots which serve as armour to the legs.
A man on horseback, in his breeches and jack boots, dressed up in a comode and a night-rail. Spectator.
JACK BY THE HEDGE. n. s. An herb.
Jack by the hedge is an herb that grows wild under hedges, is eaten as other fallads are, and much used in broth. Mortim.
JACK PUDDING. n. s. [from jack and pudding.] A zani; a merry Andrew.
Every jack pudding will be ridiculing palpable weaknesses which they ought to cover. L'Estrange.
A buffoon is called by every nation by the name of the dith they like best: in French jean pottage, and in English jack pudding. Guardian.
Jack pudding, in his party-colour'd jacket,
Tosses the glove, and jokes at ev'ry packet. Gay.
JACK WITH A LANTERN. An ignis fatuus.
JACKALANT. n. s. [from Jack in Lent, a poor starven fellow.] A simple sheepish fellow.
You little jackalant, have you been true to us?
—Ay, I'll be sworn. Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.
JACKAL, n. s. [from chacal, French.] A small animal supposed to start prey for the lion.
The Belgians tack upon our rear,
And raking chafe-guns through our sterns they send:
Close by their firehips, like jackals, appear,
Who on their lions for the prey attend. Dryd. Ann. Mirab.
